

ABSTRACT

A power steering system includes a device for actively applying an additional steering torque as well as a device for actively applying a superposition steering angle.